QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the District of Columbia Self-Government and Government Reorganization Act, Pub. L. 93-198, 87 STAT. 774(1973) (hereafter cited as Reorganization Act), an Act of Congress delegating legislative power to the District of Columbia Government with mandated standards and rules of conduct to be followed by city officials, is a "statute of the United States" for purposes of appeal under 28 U.S.C. §1257(1)?
2. Whether, given the fact that an invalid personnel action (Form 1) had been fraudulently prepared and signed by the City Administrator, Mr. Elija Baby Rogers, and the Director of the D.C. Office of Personnel, thus causing no valid personnel action to be authorized which could have changed Mr. Rodriguez's volunteer service with the D.C. Office of Employee Appeals to one of employee for compensation, did the Executive Office of the Mayor violate Section 422(2) and (3), 446, 447, and 714(c) of the Reorganization Act by repeatedly alleging that Mr. Rodriguez was employed for compensation while collecting unemployment compensation?

3. Whether, given the fact that the D.C. Office of Employee Appeals had not received Congressional authorization for a budget or to hire personnel for FY80 and that no supplemental budget had as yet either been submitted or approved for FY 80, did the Executive Office of the Mayor violate Sections 446, 447, and 603(a) of the Reorganization Act in repeatedly alleging that Mr. Rodriguez was employed for compensation with the Office of Employee Appeals?
4. Whether the administrative process of the D.C. Department of Employment Services; Mr. Ivanhoe Donaldson, Special Assistant to Mayor Barry/ Acting Director of the Department of Employment Services; and the District of Columbia Court of Appeals (an Article I, legislative court) violated Sections 422(2) and (3), 446, 447, 603, and 714(c) of the Reorganization Act, in finding Mr. Rodriguez's volunteer service agreement with the Office of Employee Appeals was changed to one of an employee for compensation through the signing of the oath of office form (Appointment Affidavit) without the existence of a valid personnel action (Form 1), as required by an Act of Congress and numerous Comptroller General Decisions?

5. Whether Mayor Marion Barry of the District of Columbia has the authority to amend an Act of Congress and an act of the City Council, which vested the District Unemployment Compensation Board with plenary authority to administer and render final decisions under the District Unemployment Compensation Act?

a. Whether Mr. Ivanhoe Donaldson, Special Assistant to the Mayor/ Acting Director of the Department of Employment Services, has the statutory jurisdiction under the District Unemployment Compensation Act to issue a valid final decision for the Unemployment Compensation Board?

b. Whether the personnel in the Department Employment Services has the necessary jurisdiction to administer the District Unemployment Compensation Program?

6. Whether, given that the current District Unemployment Compensation hearing process under the direct control of Mayor Marion Barry, or one of his agents, and the record shows that Mr. Rodriguez has over the past three years repeatedly alleged criminal malfeasance on the part of Mayor Barry and his agents in violation of Federal and District law, did Mr. Rodriguez receive a fair and impartial hearing either in the administrative hearing process or within the D.C. Court of Appeals (an Article I, legislative court) as required by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution?

7. Whether, given the numerous procedural violations, which include but are not limited to the following: denial of access to documents which were under the control of the District Government; denial of a copy of the claims deputy findings of fact and determination; denial of repeated motions to the District Court of Appeals to correct mistakes and omissions in the record submitted by the District Government; denial to both a speedy administrative hearing and a judicial hearing on the issue of jurisdiction, was Mr. Rodriguez denied his right to due process under the Fifth Amendment?
8. Whether, given that Mr. Rodriguez was repeatedly denied his requests to subpoena documents or witnesses throughout the hearing process, was he denied his right to due process under the Fifth Amendment?

9. Whether Mr. Rodriguez's right to free speech and his right to petition Congress secured under the First Amendment were violated by retaliatory acts, including the raising of false unemployment compensation fraud allegation, by the Government of the District of Columbia?
10. Whether the Council of the District of Columbia violated section 302, 602(a)(3) of the Reorganization Act, and the Constitutional prohibition on ex post facto laws, when it passed two acts in late 1981 which retroactively attempted to vest Mayor Marion Barry with authority for the Unemployment Compensation program, which he previously did not have?

THE QUESTIONS PRESENTED ARE SUBSTANTIAL	41
The District of Columbia Self-Government and Government Reorganization Act, Pub. L. 93-198, 87 STAT. 774(1973), an Act of Congress which organized the current District Government structure and delegated legislative power to city officials in accord with the requirements of this Court, that such delegation contain standards and rules of conduct to be followed, is either a "statute of the United States" for purposes of appeal under 28 U.S.C. §1257(1), this to enable the Supreme Court to assure that Congress's delegation of legislative authority is followed; or conversely, the District of Columbia Self-Government and Government Reorganization Act, supra, is not a "statute of the United States", in which case the current District Government structure is un-Constitutional since the required standards and rules of conduct are not present to make a valid legislative delegation.

JURISDICTION

This Civil appeal has repeatedly drawn into question: First, Congress's mandate that District officials comply with the requirements of the Reorganization Act, and second, the elements required as a condition precedent to employment and compensation within the Government of the District of Columbia and the validity of the authority and jurisdiction of the District Unemployment Compensation Board to administer and render a final decision under the District Unemployment Compensation Act, D.C. Code §46-301, et. seq. (1973). The decision of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals goes against the requirements and mandate of the Reorganization Act, a statute of the United States.

On April 4, 1980 petitioner filed an appeal to the Audit letter of April 3, 1980. Another appeal was filed on April 23, 1980, (with an addendum on April 28), to the "Amended" Audit letter dated April 18, 1982. An appeal of the Decision of Appeals Examiner, dated February 20, 1981, was filed on February 27, 1981. On June 27, 1981, an appeal was filed to the Proposed Finding of Fact and Decision by the Special Assistant to the Mayor/Acting Director of the Department of Employment Services, dated June 18, 1981. A Final Decision was issued on July 7, 1981.

Timely Petition for Review was filed with the District of Columbia Court of Appeals on July 21, 1981.

Nearly two and a half years after the beginning of the administrative appeal process, the Memorandum Opinion and Judgement of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, was entered on August 5, 1982.

A timely Petition for Rehearing En Banc was filed on August 18, 1982, and was denied on October 5, 1982.

The Notice of Appeal to this Court was filed on October 18, 1982, with the Clerk of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

Jurisdiction of this Court is invoked pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1257(1).

A case in support of jurisdiction is Key v. Doyle, 434 U.S. 59(1977), reh. denied 434 U.S. 1025(1977).

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS AND STATUTES INVOLVED

The revelant provisions of the Constitution, and the District of Columbia Self-Government and Government Reorganization Act, are set forth in Appendix D, (hereinafter cited as Reorganization Act).

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Mr. Isidoro Rodriquez, a resident of the State of Virginia, was employed as Acting Legal Counsel/Expert Consultant to the Executive Office of the Mayor for the District of Columbia from April 28, 1979 thru December 4, 1979.¹ Subsequent to a closed advisory briefing to Mayor Marion Barry; Special Assistant, Ivanhoe Donaldson; City Administrator, Elija Baby Rodgers; and the Director of the Office of Personnel, Mr. Jose Gutierrez, without notice or reason Mr. Rodriquez was removed from his office at 4:30 P.M. on December 4, 1979.²

In a letter to the Mayor, Mr. Rodriguez stated that litigation would commence for breach of his employment contract and violation of his civil rights, unless monies owed were paid.³

On January 7, 1980 Mr. Rodriguez filed for unemployment compensation insurance benefits. Both Mr. Rodriguez and the base period employer, the Executive Office of the Mayor, Office of Personnel, were mailed, on January 23, 1980, copies of a determination of eligibility. Furthermore, each time Mr. Rodriguez reported for and was paid unemployment compensation benefits for weeks ending January 20, thru March 22, 1980, the Executive Office of the Mayor, Office of Personnel, which included an Unemployment Monitoring Branch, received notification (see Tab W-2 of the Record on file with D.C. Court of Appeals. On the reverse side of these notifications, the Office of the Mayor was directed to inform the Unemployment Compensation Board if it was believed that the claimant (Mr. Rodriguez) was not unemployed or was otherwise ineligible.

During this period, Mr. Rodriguez sought out employment. On January 23, 1982, the newly appointed members of the Office of Employee Appeals for the District of Columbia, (hereafter cited as OEA) met with Mr. Rodriguez to discuss the possibility of contracting for his services.⁴ The issue confronting the members, and in particular the Chairperson, Ms. Sharron Banks, who was the chief administrative officer and was the only one authorized to hire for OEA, was how to pay for the services of Mr. Rodriguez, when they had not been included in the District's FY 80 Budget, and thus had no Congressional authorization for OEA's establishment, budget, or ability to hire.⁵

After numerous discussions with Ms. Banks between January 23 and February 4, 1980, it was mutually agreed that Mr. Rodriguez would work as a volunteer to OEA pending the development of a contract of employment. It was further agreed that the Mr. Rodriguez would draft the necessary regulation to make OEA operational, develop a proposal for an organizational structure, and assist the Chairperson in developing a Supplemental Budget request for FY 80 to be presented to Congress. Finally, it was agreed that once a supplemental budget had been approved by Congress for FY 80, Mr. Rodriguez would be compensated for the services he performed. (Note footnote 8) Until Congress acted, he had no idea whether he would ever be paid for volunteer services to OEA.⁶ (Congress passed OEA's budget request in November 1980.)

On February 4, 1980, Mr. Rodriguez began performing volunteer service to OEA, and signed a document entitled Appointment Affidavit.⁷ At the time of signing, the form was neither notarized nor witnessed in any fashion.

While performing the above mentioned volunteer work, Mr. Rodriguez continued to apply for and received his unemployment compensation insurance.⁸ During this period, in addition to the above events, Mr. Rodriguez received a check in early February and one in mid-March from the Executive Office of the Mayor, Office of Personnel. They were sent without any pay stub to designate the dispersing agency, but when Mr. Rodriguez inquired, he was informed over the telephone that they related to his former service with the Office of Personnel.⁹ Despite repeated request, no documents were given to Mr. Rodriguez.

On March 18, 1980, Mr. Rodriguez received an individual pay stub with no reference to what agency it related to. Mr. Rodriguez, as well as Mr. Val Harris, the OEA Office Manager on detail for the City Administrators Office were informed by telephone it was attributed to the Office of Employee Appeals for payment of services of Mr. Rodriguez. During the subsequent two weeks, despite repeated attempts to get information as to how this was possible, since as yet the Office had not even submitted its Supplemental Budget request to Congress for FY 1980, Mr. Rodriguez was provided with no information as to what changed his volunteer status or how an office, as yet unauthorized by Congress, could have money or authority to hire.

On April 1, 1980, Mr. Herbert Reid, Legal Counsel to the Mayor informed Mr. Rodriguez that the Internal Operations Unit of the D.C. Metropolitan Police Force had been ordered to arrest Mr. Rodriguez on the charge of unemployment compensation fraud the next day when he went down to sign for unemployment compensation benefits. Mr. Rodriguez responded that given the fact that the Executive Office of the Mayor had been informed each time that Mr. Rodriguez received unemployment compensation and that information had been repeatedly denied when requested, it was very clear that a conspiracy had been underway against Mr. Rodriguez.¹⁰ Mr. Rodriguez at that time stated that he would use the administrative process to clear the record and his name (by April 1, the D.C. Government had already widely distributed documents that Mr. Rodriguez was guilty of unemployment fraud).

On April 4, 1980, Mr. Rodriguez met with Mr. George L. Jackson, Acting Assistant Director, Unemployment Compensation; and Mr. James Matson, Claims Examiner. At this time, a letter dated April 1, 1980 and a certified check for one thousand dollars were delivered. Mr. Rodriguez stated in the letter, he was paying $1000.00 to, "foreclose the appearance of impropriety...and to commence a review of his unemployment compensation claim."

On the same day, Mr. Jackson handed Mr. Rodriguez an audit letter dated April 3, 1980. The letter was notification of a redetermination of Mr. Rodriguez's eligibility to receive benefits and an overpayment of $1267.00, and stated further that, "[t]his is a result of not reporting that you became a full-time employee as of 2-4-80 and you are no longer unemployed."¹¹

Prior to and after reading the letter Mr. Rodriguez objected to not having an opportunity to respond to the allegation of being employed or of having a possible overpayment. Further, he noted that there appeared to have been serious violations of his rights by individuals in the Executive Office of the Mayor, Office of Personnel, and the Department of Employment Services.

Mr. Rodriguez stated that he had filed a formal appeal to the audit letter. To this Mr. Jackson responded to Mr. Rodriguez to be careful, since it was his experience that the District was prone to do "unethical things." Mr. Jackson stated that it was already decided by "higher authority" to find Mr. Rodriguez disqualified for two years for violating D.C. Code 46-319(e)(1973).¹²

Mr. Rodriguez was told that he would be receiving shortly thereafter an "amended" letter of notification from Mr. Matson.¹³ With this the meeting ended.

On April 7, 1980, Mr. Rodriguez met with Mr. Matson to object to the lack of regulations governing the procedures to be followed in an appeal and to determine where the Unemployment Compensation Board was located.¹⁴

On April 18, 1980, Mr. James Matson, Claims Examiner, issued his "amended" letter of notification that an audit revealed that an overpayment had existed.

I

On April 23, 1980 (and in the addendum of April 28, 1980), Mr. Rodriguez, for the first time, raised to Mr. Matson the question of non-compliance with an Act of Congress regarding budget authorization, employment in accord with Comptroller General requirements and procedural due process. This was done verbally as well as in writing. These issues were not dealt with at any point.

On April 23, 1980, Mr. Rodriguez filed an appeal to Mr. Matson's notification of a redetermination. The appeal was on the issue of overpayment and the issue of being employed.¹⁵

During the subsequent week, Mr. Rodriguez was in contact with Mr. Matson, and on April 28, Mr. Rodriguez delivered an addendum to his April 23, 1980 letter. This addendum spelled out the factual and legal issues, showing that Mr. Rodriguez never had information as to being employed nor could he have received income, since the Office of Employee appeals had not received any budget or hiring authorization from Congress for FY 80, as required by the Reorganization Act, Section 446 and 447 (See Appendix D). As further grounds for appeal, the addendum listed numerous procedural errors in violation of Mr. Rodriguez's statutory and Constitutional rights, including the refusal to maintain confidentiality and to provide him information to prepare an appeal, D.C. Code 46-313(f)(1973), and alleged that the Mayor, et al., were guilty of violation of D.C. Code §46-317(b) and 46-319(b)(1973) for falsifying employment records.

At the April 28th meeting, Mr. Matson, stated that he had already made his determination as required by "19(e)." When Mr. Rodriguez asked for a copy of it, Mr. Matson said that he could not give him a copy, but would allow him to read it and take notes.¹⁶ Mr. Rodriguez objected at this time to not having a copy of findings in order to develop an appeal as required by D.C. Code 46-319(e)(1973). In addition, he objected to not being shown the record as required by Section 46-311(f) and Section 46-313(f) of the D.C. Code, to determine what facts were used to support Mr. Matson's decision. Finally, Mr. Rodriguez raised the question of how the claims examiner, who develops the audit letter, could be the claims deputy, who was to make the findings for a Section 46-319(e) determination.

In early May, 1980, Mr. Rodriguez made a number of written requests for information, under both District and Federal law, which were in the hands of Mayor Marion Barry, the Chief of Police of the D.C. Metropolitan Police Force, and the Director of the Unemployment Compensation Board. None of these requests were complied with.

On May 20, 1980, Mr. Rodriguez received notice that a hearing would be held on May 30, 1980, on the issue of:

Whether section 19(e)(sic) of the District Unemployment Compensation Law with a declaration of ineligibility for a full two years would be enforced.

On May 26, 1980, Mr. Rodriguez was informed by Ms. Jones of the Appeals Section that the Hearing Examiner had granted the Executive Office of the Mayor, Office of Personnel a postponement. Mr. Rodriguez objected to this since he neither had written notification in order to file a motion in opposition, nor had he been informed of what constituted the showing of good cause to permit the postponement.

On June 20, 1980, Mr. Rodriguez wrote to Ms. Jones of the Appeals Section to again object to the fact that no new hearing date had been set and that as yet, no written notice granting the postponement had been sent. In addition, Mr. Rodriguez requested a copy of Unemployment Compensation regulations and the "necessary form to request discovery."

On July 3, 1980, Mr. Rodriguez received a notice of a rescheduled hearing set for July 16, 1980, to be conducted by Hearing Examiner Allen Weil. In addition to the hearing on July 16, 1980, hearings were held on October 9, November 18, and December 2, 1980.

II

On July 16th, 1980, and throughout the other above mentioned hearings, Mr. Rodriguez, for the second time, raised the question of non-compliance with an Act of Congress regarding budget authorization, employment in accord with Comptroller General requirements, and procedural due process. The methods of raising these questions were both in writing and in oral argument. Finally, the manner in which the issues were passed on was to ignore them.

Throughout the hearing, Mr. Rodriguez made vigorous and timely objections to the manner in which the hearings were being conducted: not only was Mr. Rodriguez denied the right to submit documents in his defense, and the right to conduct discovery, including the right to subpoena witnesses and obtain a copy of the findings of the Claims Deputy, but also the Hearings Examiner refused to deal with any of the alleged violations of Mr. Rodriguez's rights under the Unemployment Compensation Act.¹⁷ Furthermore, throughout the hearing, Mr. Rodriguez objected vigorously to Weil's conduct and rulings which showed a clear lack of impartiality and bias to the Government of the District of Columbia.

On August 16, 1980, Mr. Rodriguez withdrew one portion of his appeal with regard to overpayment, since it was explained to him that he could only appeal that issue within the ten day period after receipt of notice of eligibility on January 23, 1980. Mr. Rodriguez continued his appeal of overpayment as it related to being allegedly employed.¹⁸

During the entire hearing process, the Executive Office of the Mayor, Office of Personnel, had based its case in chief on two documents: first, a Personnel Action (Form 1) signed on February 20, 1980 by Ms. Otis L. Jackson for the Acting Director of the Office of Personnel, and co-signed by the City Administrator Elija Baby Rodgers (without the knowledge or approval of OEA) with no date as to when it was signed and with a retroactive effective date to February 4, 1980; and second, an Appointment Affidavit signed by Mr. Rodriguez on February 4, 1980, but with a notary's signature of Ms. Sandra Michaels dated February 20, 1980.

In response to this, through vigorous cross-examination of the Chairperson, Ms. Banks, Mr. Rodriguez compelled her to admit that she had not given anyone the authority to prepare a personnel action for her or to sign it, that neither she nor Mr. Rodriguez knew or approved of the personnel action, and Ms.

Banks stipulated during the hearing that there was no Office of Employee Appeals with which
Mr. Rodriguez could be employed.¹⁹

In addition to repeatedly noting and having reaffirmed by the Government's witnesses that the OEA had no Congressional authorization to hire, Mr. Rodriguez, both in oral argument²⁰ and in a closing brief filed on December 12, 1980 with the Appeals Section of the District of Columbia Department of Labor, noted that the District Government was required to comply with Comptroller General Decisions, Section 422(3), 603 and 714(c) of the Reorganization Act.

Consequently, judicial notice had to be given to the Federal law as to the essential requirements to being "employed" and receiving compensation, which included a valid personnel action and an oath of office that must be completed prior to being on the payroll.²¹

First, there must be an entrance on duty under a valid appointment before payment of compensation is authorized. For an appointment to be valid there must be an authorized position in accordance with applicable laws, and the head of the agency must have signed the appointment document. The appointment is evidenced by an official personnel action which must contain valid information and is separate and apart from the document which evidences the oath of office. 20 Comp. Gen. 267 (1940) and cases cited therein.

Second, the appointment is effective from the date of acceptance on duty only after the appointing power actually takes action, unless a later date is stated in the appointment. 5 U.S.C. 303(b) and D.C. Code § 1-336.1(c) and (g)(Supp. VII, 1980), designating only the Chairperson of OEA as having power to appoint for the independent agency. Furthermore, the appointment may not be made retroactively effective to cover service previously rendered, 18 Comp. Gen. 907 (1939), 20 id.

267(1940). cf. 54 Comp. Gen. 1028(1975). An employee is not entitled to compensation for any period prior to the date of a valid appointment action, although during such period he may have actually performed the duties of the position and taken the oath of office, 4 Comp. Gen. 675(1975). Finally to have a valid appointment under the District's new merit personnel law, the nature of the appointment must be made known to the employee prior to effecting the appointment, D.C. Code § 1-339.4(e)(Supp. VII, 1980).

As to the purpose of the Appointment Affidavit, it serves only as an oath to defend the Constitution and an affidavit that the office has not been purchased, which is not a personnel action creating an appointment, 5 U.S.C. 3333. It serves merely as a condition precedent to the payment of any compensation due only after a valid appointment has been executed. 21 Comp. Gen. 817(1947). 40 Comp. Gen. 500(1961).

In closing his brief, Mr. Rodriguez turned to the facts of the case to note that the Personnel Action (Form 1) was not only invalid because it was retroactive, but also because it was not signed by an authorized official of OEA. Finally, since the personnel form has not been shown to or accepted by Mr. Rodriguez, it was beyond question that the form was invalid. Consequently, the Appointment Affidavit which Mr. Rodriguez signed on February 4, 1980 when he commenced volunteer service, standing alone did not change his status to an employee for compensation.

On February 20, 1981, Hearing Examiner Weil issued his decision, which affirmed the holding of Mr. Matson that there was an overpayment, but that there was no violation of Section 19(e) Fraud. For the second time the hearing officer refused to pass on the question raised that is now before this Court.

III

On February 27, 1981, Mr. Rodriguez, for the third time, raised the question of non-compliance with an Act of Congress regarding budget authorization, employment in accord with Comptroller General requirements, and procedural due process. The methods used to raise these questions were both written and oral statements. Finally, the manner in which the issues were passed on was to ignore them.

On February 27, 1981, Mr. Rodriguez filed an appeal of the decision with the Office of Appeals and Review, D.C. Department of Employment Services, Office of Unemployment Compensation. The basis of appeal was falsification of personnel documents, violation of procedural due process, and violation of Mr. Rodriguez's Constitutional and statutory rights.

On the same date Mr. Rodriguez made a formal request to the Director, Office of Unemployment Compensation, for copies of the Claim record, exhibits from the hearing and a transcript of the hearing. On March 11, 1982, the Associate Director, Office of Unemployment Compensation, agreed to supply the requested material. Up to this point, Mr. Rodriguez had been totally unsuccessful in attempts to obtain any information to prepare an appeal or to document for his defense. All this information was and is in the hands of the District Government.

On April 4, 1981, Mr. Rodriguez received notice that the Executive Office of the Mayor, Office of Personnel had filed an appeal to Hearing Examiner Weil's decision regarding denial of the 19(e) disqualification against Mr. Rodriguez.²²

On June 12, 1982, Mr. Rodriguez appeared before the Committee on Government Operations, Oversight Hearing on "The Implementation of the District of Columbia Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act of 1978(D.C.Law 2-139)", and presented opposing testimony to that of Mr. Ivanhoe Donaldson, Special Assistant to the Mayor/Acting Director Department of Employment

Services. Mr. Rodriguez alleged that willful non-compliance with the Congressional mandate was being conducted by the Barry Administration's handling of Disability Compensation program for City Employees.²³

On June 22, 1982, Mr. Rodriguez received a copy of the Proposed Finding of Fact and Decision of Mr. Ivanhoe Donaldson, Acting Director, Department of Employment Services. In his decision, Mr. Donaldson affirmed the two lower decisions as to overpayment, but reversed on the issue of no 19(e) disqualification, and found that Mr. Rodriguez had been employed with the Office of Employee Appeals from February 4, 1980 thru March 1980, and thus was guilty of fraud pursuant to 19(e).

IV

For the fourth time Mr. Rodriguez raised the questions presented of non-compliance with an Act of Congress regarding budget authorization, employment/compensation procedures of the Comptroller General, and substantive and procedural due process. The method of raising these questions was in writing. For the first time in writing, Mr. Rodriguez raised a challenge to jurisdiction. Finally, for the fourth time questions raised were not dealt with in any manner.

On June 27, 1982, Mr. Rodriguez replied to the Proposed Finding of Fact and Decision, in addition to the same issues, the authority of Mr. Donaldson to make a determination for the District Unemployment Compensation Board was challenged. This challenge was not only based on the fact that Mr. Donaldson was not a member of the Board, as required by Federal Statute as well as District law, but as importantly, Mr. Rodriguez, during the past year had made numerous allegations of malfeasance on the part of both Mayor Marion Barry and Mr. Donaldson, and thus alleged non-receipt of a fair hearing.

On July 9, 1981, Mr. Rodriguez received the Final Decision of Mr. Donaldson. In response to Mr. Rodriguez's challenge of lack of jurisdiction, Mr. Donaldson stated that the powers, duties and functions of the District Unemployment Compensation Board were transferred to the Director of the Department of Employment Services (formerly the Department of Labor) by the Mayor's Reorganization Plan No. 1 of 1978 and 1980. Finally, despite the facts to the contrary, Mr. Donaldson stated that "nothing in the record indicates that the Claimant requested copies of any document." Therefore he affirmed on the finding of overpayment and reversed on the non-finding of fraud-Section 19(e).

V

On July 21, 1982, a timely Petition for Review was filed with the District of Columbia Columbia Court of Appeals.

For the fifth time Mr. Rodriguez raised the question of non-compliance with an Act of Congress regarding budget authorizatiton, employment in accord with Comptroller General requirements, and procedural due process (in particular, failure to maintain and supply a record, as well as refusal to supply subpoenas for witnesses and documents). In addition, Mr. Rodriguez challenged the issue of the District Department of Employment Services' jurisdiction in unemployment compensation matters. The methods used to raise these questions were both in numerous motions, in a written brief, and in oral argument.

Between July 21, 1981 and October 8, 1981, Mr. Rodriguez filed the following motions with the District of Columbia Court of Appeals:

On July 22, 1981, Motion for an expedited hearing for a stay pending expedited review due to lack of jurisdiction.²⁴

On July 30, 1981, Motion to Object to Respondent's Counsel And to Require the Representation By D.C. Corporation Counsel of the District Department of Employment Services, due to lack of jurisdiction.

On July 30, 1981, Petitioner's Reply to Response in Opposition to Appellant's Motion for Stay Pending Review.

On August 6, 1981, Motion for Reconsideration of Petitioner's July 22, 1981, Motion for Stay Pending Review.

On August 7, 1981, Petitioner's Reply to Respondent's Response of August 3, 1981.

On August 14, 1981, Petitioner's Response to a Motion for Enlargement of Time to File The Record.

On August 17, 1981, Petitioner's Motion to Require the Filing of a True and Original Record.

On August 18, 1981, Stipulations To the Transcript Filed By Respondent, August 14, 1981; A Motion To Strike; A Motion To Require The Filing of the Initial Determination of Mr. James Matson, Dated April 23, 1980; Motion to Require the Filing of the Original Appointment Affidavit; Reply to Respondent's Response to Motion to Require the Filing of a True and Original Record.

On September 29, 1981, Motion to Require the Filing of Payroll Register and Time/Att. Sheets; Two Separate Motions To Correct Omissions In The Record; Motion To Require The Examination of the Original Taped Testimony; Motion for Enlargement of Time To File Petitioner's Brief.

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals denied the July 22nd Motion for Stay on August 3, 1981. On October 8, 1982, the Court of Appeals denied the motions for reconsideration and to strike respondent's counsel. It granted Mr. Rodriguez enlargement of time to file his brief since it had already been filed, but then the Court of Appeals deferred the time the District of Columbia Department of Employment Services was to file its brief pending resolution of the number of motions regarding the record.

As noted, on October 7, 1982, Mr. Rodriguez filed his extensive Brief and Argument with the Court of Appeals. Four issues were presented for review.

On October, 19, 1981, Mr. Rodriguez again filed with the District Court of Appeals a motion for Immediate Judicial Review, as well as a motion for reconsideration of the October 8, 1981 Order of the Court denying a stay of the "Final Decision" of June 18, 1981, and the deferring of the filing of Respondent's brief.²⁵ On October 28, 1981, Mr. Rodriguez filed a motion for an order to the Department of Employment Services directing them to abstain from conducting further administrative hearings pending a decision regarding the challenge to their taking jurisdiction.

In all of his motions on the issue, as well as in extensive detail in his brief, Mr. Rodriguez refuted the District Government's argument that either Mayor Washington's Reorganization Plan No. 1 of 1978 (eff. June, 1978, 25 D.C. Reg. 2889) or Mayor Barry's Reorganization Plan No. 1 of 1980 (eff. June 1980, 27 D.C. Reg. 2724) could legally abolish and then transfer the powers, duties, and functions of the District Unemployment Compensation Board to the Director, District Department of Employment Services.

Very simply, the Board had always been independent with primary responsibility for unemployment compensation.²⁶ This had been affirmed by the Court of Appeals and the City Council.²⁷

Consequently, Mr. Rodriguez argued both in writing and later in oral argument, that the District Government's contentions were pure sophistry. To argue that former Mayor Washington, and current Mayor Barry via a Mayor's Reorganization Plan issued in 1978 and 1980 respectively, could amend a statute of Congress which created the authority for the Board, and ignore a statute of Congress as to legislative authority of the Council, was not only illogical but illegal. It was liken to the Mayor of Detroit, via a mayor's executive order transferring the authority to operate the Navy, to the Director of Public Works of Lake Michigan.

Beginning in early July, 1981, Mr. Rodriguez more vigorously continued to petition numerous Congressmen for an investigation of the District Government, in response the City Council began passing retroactive legislation in an attempt to provide a veil of authority to the Mayor's past actions and thus support the decision against Mr. Rodriguez.

On November 20, 1981, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals issued an order denying each and every one of Mr. Rodriguez's motions regarding the record, stay, and an immediate judicial review on the challenge to jurisdiction. No reason or holding was given for the denial. Furthermore, the court unilaterally permitted the District Department of Employment Services to file its brief on December 21, 1981. The Government's brief had been due on November 4, 1981.

On December 21, 1981, the District's Department of Employment Services filed a motion to extend time for filing of their brief. Having received this motion on Christmas Eve, Mr. Rodriguez had to wait until December 28, 1981 to file his motion opposing the extending of time. Mr. Rodriguez opposed it on the grounds that the Government had been in total control of the record (and had repeatedly refused to supply any portion to Mr. Rodriguez), thus it was ludicrous for them now to use the extensiveness of it as a reason to not supply a brief in response to the one filed by Mr. Rodriguez more than eighty-one days earlier. In addition, Mr. Rodriguez noted that the Court of Appeals had already unilaterally granted the City Government an extra sixty-one days above his objection, which added to the thirty days provided for in Rule 31(2), gave the City Government ninety-one days to prepare and file their brief.

On January 5, 1982, Chief Judge Theodore R. Newman granted the District Government's motion to extend time and ordered that the brief be filed on January 22, 1982.

On January 22, 1982, the District's Department of Employment Services filed a motion for further extension of time in which to file its brief, the reason for the requested delay was "weather conditions." On January 26, 1982 Mr. Rodriguez filed a motion objecting to further extension of time for the City Government to file its brief on the grounds that this would further deprive Mr. Rodriguez of his right to a fair hearing and due process. On the same date Mr. Rodriguez filed a motion for dismissal due to lack of prosecution.

On February 1, 1982, Judge Catherine B. Kelly granted the City Government an extension of time to file its brief and denied Mr. Rodriguez his motion for dismissal. Thus, one hundred and three days after Mr. Rodriguez filed his brief on October 7, 1981, the City Government filed its brief, on February 1, 1982, and a hearing was set for March 10, 1982.

It is worth noting that the Government's brief at page six, based the Mayor's power to reorganize the Unemployment Compensation Board out of existence, on the grounds that the, "[e]xercise of the Presidential reorganization power (on which the Mayoral (sic) power is based) has always included the power to abolish entities subject to executive control." Furthermore, the brief did not address any of the issues regarding budget, employment, or personnel. Finally, at page eleven, the D.C. Government stated,

The Appeals Examiner properly refused to issue subpoenas requested by [Mr. Rodriguez]. The subpoenas were sought to be directed to the Mayor of the District of Columbia, the City Administrator, the then Director of DOES, and a retired Director of the Office of Unemployment Compensation. The first three of these are public officials who are actively engaged in the performance of official duties which involve a substantial amount of time and are of far reaching consequence. The Appeals Examiner quite properly ruled that it is neither necessary nor reasonable to issue subpoenas to such officials in a hearing on a claim for unemployment compensation.

On March 10, 1982, Mr. Rodriguez presented oral argument before a three member panel composed of Associate Judges Ferren, Pryor, and Belson. The two arguments that Mr. Rodriguez presented on the various issues were that he could not have been employed during the period in question with the OEA since it had not been authorized by the necessary Act of Congress and had no budget. In addition, no personnel action (Form 1) changing his status from volunteer to employee had been approved and signed by the authorized official as required by Comptroller General decisions which the District Government was required to follow.

During the oral argument of Ms. Grace L. Rosner, attorney for the District's Department of Employment Services, the Judges repeatedly turned to questions regarding Mr. Rodriguez's access to the record prior to the final agency decision.

On March 11, 1982, the City Government filed a motion for leave to file an affidavit. The purpose of said affidavit was to attest to the alleged fact that Mr. Rodriguez picked up copies of eight cassettes containing the lengthy hearing and that no other item was taken from the case file by him.

On March 17, 1982, D.C. Court of Appeals denied the Government's motion for leave to file an affidavit. But on March 18, 1982, the Court ordered the record remanded to the Department of Employment Services to determine whether Mr. Rodriguez's request of February 27, 1981, had been complied with. This was nine months after Mr. Rodriguez began filing motions regarding the record, all of which had been denied.

On April 7, 1982, Mr. Rodriguez filed a motion for reconsideration of the order of the Court dated March 18, 1982, and for a stay pending a judgment on the issue of jurisdiction of the Department of Employment Services to render a final decision for the Unemployment Compensation Board. In his motion, Mr. Rodriguez noted that he had filed numerous motions regarding the record throughout 1981, and repeatedly raised the issue of non-receipt of the record, all these motions were denied by the Court. Furthermore, to remand back to an administrative agency whose jurisdiction has been repeatedly challenged and which is an issue before the Court was inappropriate.

On April 9, 1982, the Court denied Mr. Rodriguez's motion.

On April 12, 1982, hearing was conducted by Mr. Michael E. Bray, Hearing Officer, Office of Wage-Hour, Department of Employment Services. Mr. Rodriguez refused to attend on the grounds that Mr. Bray had no jurisdiction to hear an issue dealing with unemployment compensation.

On April 21, 1982, the Court of Appeals docketed the supplemental record prepared by Mr. Bray, and sought Mr. Rodriguez's comments to this new record.

On May 11, 1982, Mr. Rodriguez filed his comments which again challenged the jurisdiction of such a hearing, noted that he neither received official transcript nor documents, that he never received the required determination of a claims deputy with finding, as required, and that he received no record as required by the D.C. Code § 46-311(f) and § 46-313(f)(1973).

On August 5, 1982, the D.C. Court of Appeals issued its memorandum opinion and judgment (see Appendix A) affirming the final decision of the Acting Director of the District of Columbia Department of Employment Services which ordered Mr. Rodriguez disqualified from receiving unemployment compensation for a period of two years on the grounds that he committed fraud.

The Court disposed of the issue of overpayment, by stating that Mr. Rodriguez conceded the issue of overpayment in the hearing.²⁸

The Court first found that Mr. Rodriguez had received a copy of the record in accord with D.C. Code §1-1509(c).

The Court next found that Mr. Rodriguez committed fraud in violation of D.C. code §46-319(e). The Court ignored the requirement for the personnel action (Form 1). The Court based its decision on the Appointment Affidavit, saying that it was the document that made Mr. Rodriguez employed for compensation. This was in clear violation of Federal personnel law, which it was required to take judicial notice of.

Finally, the Court ignored all other issues by finding Mr. Rodriguez's arguments "unpersuasive" as to the issues that the Department is without jurisdiction to adjudicate unemployment claims; that the proceedings before the Department were not conducted in accordance with the due process requirements of the Fifth Amendment and the provisions of the District of Columbia Administrative Procedure Act; and that the Appeals

Examiner was not impartial, but subject to the control of unnamed "higher authorities."

VI

On August 18, 1982 a timely Petition for Rehearing En Banc was filed with the District of Columbia Court of Appeals on both errors of law and fact.

On October 5, 1982, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals denied the petition for rehearing en banc (Appendix B) and a timely notice of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States was filed on October 18, 1982 with the Clerk of the Court of Appeals (Appendix C).

THE QUESTIONS PRESENTED ARE SUBSTANTIAL

This case presents a number of important questions, concerning the administration of this Nation's Capital, the District of Columbia, by the various units of city government delegated authority by Congress under the Reorganization Act.

The Reorganization Act, a federal law passed by Congress and approved by the President, delegated legislative power to the District government. In delegating, Congress complied with this Court's requirements that for a delegation to be valid, set standards and rules of conduct must be followed by city officials, thereby limiting their discretion. This case raises a number of substantial questions because numerous city officials have willfully violated these Congressionally mandated controls, and if their acts of noncompliance are allowed to stand, they would invalidate the Reorganization Act.

Consequently, the questions presented are distinguishable from the issue raised in Key v. Doyle, 434 U.S. 59, 54 L.Ed. 2d 238, 98 S. Ct. 280(1977), and fall into the exception which would permit the application of 28 U.S.C. §1257(1) for an appeal to the United States Supreme Court of a final judgment of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

In Key v. Doyle, supra, in footnote 14, at page 68, this Court held that a law applicable only in the District of Columbia is not a "statute of the United States," and thus, an appeal from a decision of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals would be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. However, this Court noted that 28 U.S.C. §1257(1), would be applicable if the District of Columbia court of Appeals should invalidate a federal law other than a provision of the D.C. Code.

The Reorganization Act is such a federal law, for Congress having ultimate legislative authority over the Nation's Capital under Article I, Section 8, Clause 17, of the Constitution could only delegate certain legislative powers consistent with their constitutional authority. In order to satisfy this mandate and requirement established by this Court for the existence of a valid delegation of legislative power²⁹ to be present, Congress was very careful to incorporate in the Reorganization Act standards and a legislative statement of policy sufficiently definite to prevent the exercise, upon the part of city officials of pure discretion. Section 102(a) and 302 of the Reorganization Act.

Congress stated very precisely that this Act of Congress was separate and distinct from an act of the City Council, Section 103(7) of the Reorganization Act. That the legislative powers delegated were to be administered consistent with the Constitution and the provisions of the Reorganization Act, and the Council had no authority to enact any act, or enact any act to amend, or repeal any Act of Congress which is not restricted in application exclusively to the District, Section 302 and 602(a)(3) of the Reorganization Act.

In further compliance with the requirements to be met for a valid delegation of legislative powers, Congress made the delegation very specific and restricted said legislative powers only to the City Council. It provided the Council the sole authority to abolish an instrumentality of the government of the District, and restricted the Council to the enactment of "acts" in discharging its authority. Finally, said act had to be published in a newspaper upon becoming law. Section 404(a), (b), and 412(a) of the Reorganization Act.

With regard to the role of the new Mayor's position, as chief executive of the city government, Congress again met the standard required by this Court, by not permitting the executive power of the Mayor to be purely discretionary. First, it limited the Mayor's authority to that within the Reorganization Act. Second, Congress prescribed his power to one of administering as an executive, and in accord with all Acts of Congress, including personnel laws as they relate to appointment and separation. Third, it prohibited the Mayor from using administrative orders inconsistent with the Reorganization Act or other Act of Congress or any act of the Council. Fourth and finally, Congress limited the Mayor's reorganization authority to one of the administratorial: the Mayor could not abolish any instrumentality created by Congress or the Council, Section 422(2),(3),(11), and (12), Section 603(a) and 714(c) of the Reorganization Act.

With regard to budget and employment in the District Government, Congress expressly prohibited any officer or employee of the District from obligating or expending any amount of money unless it was approved by Congress, Section 446 of the Reorganization Act. Furthermore, Congress expressly required the Mayor to establish both budget and personnel control systems, and expressly prohibited the hiring of any full-time or part-time employee unless authorized by an Act of Congress, Section 447 of the Reorganization Act.

Turning to the facts in the case, it is clear that each and every provision cited above, which Congress expressly provided for in delegating legislative authority to both the Council and the Mayor have been willfully and intentionally violated. First, despite the fact that Mr. Rodriguez and others stated repeatedly, and the facts in the record show, that he worked as a volunteer with the Office of Employee Appeal, pending an FY 80 Supplemental Request, the District Government continued to falsely make out a case that he was employed full time for compensation without the necessary authorization, in clear violation of Section 446 and 447 of the Reorganization Act. Second, despite Mr. Rodriguez pointing out that he could not have received compensation for his volunteer service with the Office of Employee Appeals, for they had not been authorized by Congress a budget or authority to spend, the District Government maintained that monies received during the period in question came from that Office and refused to permit examination of records, this in clear violation of 446 of the Reorganization Act. Third, despite Mr. Rodriguez argument that he could not have been employed, since no valid personnel action (Form 1) had been authorized which would/could have changed him from a volunteer to an employee for compensation, the District Government falsely argued that an Appointment Affidavit (the oath of office) standing alone made a person an employee for compensation, this contrary to federal personnel law as established by Acts of Congress in violation of the requirements of Section 422(2) and (3), 603(a), and 714(c) of the Reorganization Act.

Consequently, because of these numerous willful violations of the standards within the Reorganization Act, which is a federal law enacted by Congress to provide for the delegation of some of its legislative powers to the District of Columbia Government, and because if these intentional acts of non-compliance are allowed to stand which would invalidate a statute of the United States organizing the District Government, questions are raised which are so substantial as to require plenary consideration by the United States Supreme Court, with briefs on the merits and oral argument, for their resolution.

CONCLUSION

This Court has held that the central aim of the Constitution and Civil Rights Acts which emanate from it, are to provide protection to those persons wronged by the misuse of power, possessed by virtue of law and made possible only because the wrongdoer is clothed with authority of law. Consequently, in addition to a right of appeal under 28 U.S.C. §1257(1) as a result of non-compliance with an Act of Congress, this case involves substantial, willful, and malicious violations of Mr. Rodriguez's rights under the Constitution, and thus alternatively should be heard by this Court under 12 U.S.C. 1257(3).

These rights under the United States Constitution which have been violated by willful actions on the part of the Mayor and City Council (with knowledge and approval of members of the D.C. Court of Appeals, and some members of Congress) include: First, the prohibition against ex post facto law under Article I, Section 10, which has been violated by the Mayor and Council in attempting to vest the Mayor and Director of the Department of Employment Services retroactively with authority to issue a final decision for the District Unemployment Compensation Board; Second, repeated actions violating Mr. Rodriguez's right to due process under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution, these actions include, but are not limited to, the denial to any information or records during the administrative hearing process, the denial to the finding of fact of the claims deputy, the denial of the right to subpoena witnesses, and the total lack of an impartial hearing process which was not under the control of the Mayor; Third and finally, Mr. Rodriguez's right to petition Congress and to free speech secured by the First Amendment, were violated by the District Government each time he requested that responsible members of Congress undertake an investigation of the City's mismanagement.

This Court cannot permit such actions in the Nation's Capital by government officials, acting as agents for Congress in its legislative capacity. The very role and accountability of District government under the Reorganization Act is at issue.

Mr. Rodriguez having attempted to set up a viable District merit personnel system, became the target of the District's Tammany Hall political system. Rather than to permit the Mayor and City Council to violate his rights as well as all individuals who have a vested interest in our Nation's Capital, Mr. Rodriguez has for over three years tenaciously fought alone, this extensive malfeasance of the District Government. This Court now has an opportunity to correct a massive wrong imposed not only on Mr. Rodriguez, but more importantly on every citizen of these United States who are adversely affected by the mismanagement of our Nation's Capital caused by willful non-compliance with the Reorganization Act.

In closing, as the famous Black civil libertarian Mr. Frederick Douglass stated on August 4, 1857:

Those who profess to favor Freedom, and yet deprecate agitation, are men who want crops without plowing up the ground. They want rain without thunder and lightning. They want the ocean without the awful roar of its waters. This struggle may be a moral one; or it may be a physical one; or it may be both moral and physical; but it must be a struggle. Power concedes nothing without a demand. It never did, and it never will. Find out just what people will submit to, and you have found out the exact amount of injustice and wrong which will be imposed on them; and these will continue until they are resisted with either words or blows, or with both. The limit of tyrants are prescribed by the endurance of those whom they oppress.

For the aforementioned reasons, the Petitioner prays that this Court grant plenary review of the decision of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

² The closed advisory briefing was conducted by Mr. Rodriguez on November 30, 1979, with the purpose of briefing the Mayor on the status of the transition from the Federal Civil Service System to a separate District merit personnel system. At that time the Mayor was informed by Mr. Rodriguez that due to the failure of the District to budget properly for FY 80, there were a number of major problems which included the need to establish and fund the District's Disability Compensation for D.C. employees, the need to establish the Office of Employee Appeals (which was required if any adverse action or reductions-in-force were contemplated), and the need to correct the failure to comply with the City's Charter when the Mayor and City Council raised their salaries in violation of the amending procedures of Section 303(a) of the Reorganization Act.

³ At the time Mr. Rodriguez was owed approximately $7223.00 for overtime and $41,703.60 on the remainder of his contract.

order to become operational. See D.C. Code Section 1-366.1(1) and (1)(Supp. VII 1980) of the Personnel Law.

⁶ Ms. Banks testified on July 16, 1980, that when Mr. Rodriguez started to work for OEA, "he started working as a volunteer. He did not know when he would get on the payroll, or if he would be on a payroll. And my recollection is that he did not know for some time. So that the date of the 4th is when he started, but he started not knowing whether or not he would be paid....(emphasis added) Transcript July 16, 1980 Tape One/page 33.

⁷ The Appointment Affidavit, as then required by the District Government, was designed to conform with the statutory requirements of 5 U.S.C. § 3333 and § 7311. It included only three items: first, an oath of office to support and defend the Constitution; second, an affidavit as to purchase of office; and third, an affidavit as to work history.

In accord with Section 422(3) of the Reorganization Act, the District government must comply with Federal law passed by Congress regarding appointments. Consequently, a contract or personnel action (Form 1) had to be created and approved causing an appointment (employment) for compensation to begin.

⁸ Under regulations and Unemployment Insurance Program Letters issued by the U.S. Department of Labor, Manpower Administration, which the District Government must follow in administering its unemployment compensation program, if Mr. Rodriguez did eventually get paid for volunteer service performed, he is simply required to repay that amount which related to benefits received. Furthermore, under District unemployment compensation law, doing volunteer work does not constitute being employed. D.C. Code § 46-301(e) (Supp. VII. 1980). Cumming v. District Unemployment Comp. Bd., 384 A. 2d 1010(D.C. 1978), where the Court found that an attorney on a contingent fee contract not employed.

⁹ Since late December, 1979, Mr. Rodriguez was physically barred from entering the premises of the Office of Personnel. Apparently due to the fact that it was widely known that Mr. Rodriguez was continuing his preparation to sue the Mayor et. al., information relating to his past employment status was denied Mr. Rodriguez. This inability to obtain information from the government was raised throughout the hearing. Mr. Rodriguez submitted into evidence on December 2, 1980, Exhibit 22 entitled Current Obligation Budget Modification By Responsibility Center and Budget, of February 29, 1980, and March 1980, showing no allocation from the Office of Employee Appeals.

¹⁰ Mr. Rodriguez had recently prevented the Mayor from conducting a massive and illegal reduction-in-force in early 1980. Thus the need for the Mayor et. al. to get him out of OEA.

¹² On December 2, 1980, Tape Seven/page 33 of the transcript of the hearing conducted by Hearing Examiner Weil, Mr. Matson testified that, "[a]fter that meeting, well then I went to the Central Office Manager questioning the Director's comment, saying how does he know that [Mr. Rodriguez] will be disqualified for that length of time...and the Central Office Manager informed me that [Mr. Rodriguez] would be disqualified." See also Tape One/page 4, of July 16, 1980.

¹⁴ It was at this time that Mr. Rodriguez discovered that despite statutory mandate, the District Unemployment Compensation Board did not administer the unemployment compensation program, that in fact, there was no Board, and that the program was under the direct administrative control of the Mayor, via the Director of the Department of Employment Services (prior to June 1980, the District Department of Labor).

¹⁵ Mr. Rodriguez appealed the issue of overpayment on the grounds that he was eligible for unemployment compensation prior to January 7, 1980 and that he was unemployed. He appealed the issue of earnings on the grounds that he was not employed with OEA, rather, he provided volunteer services.

¹⁶ The Claims Record Card UC-170, which contained Mr. Matson's hand written notes, stated that there was an overpayment, but concluded not to impose a disqualification based on "19(e)" since, "Mr. Rodriguez denied being employed; was not aware of being allegedly employed until after March 18, 1980, when he received a large sum of money; was denied information concerning his alleged employment when he sought to determine what the check related to; and the alleged employer was not specific as to the date of commencement of the alleged employment or the amount of weekly earnings." See Tab X-3 of the Record on file with the Court of Appeals.

23 Earlier during the hearing, Mr. Ivanhoe Donaldson, testified that the Barry Administration had to submit a supplemental budget request of $3,500,000 for FY 81. Note footnote 2, supra. Up to this point despite continued efforts by Mr. Rodriguez no District Disability Compensation Program had been established.

24 This motion was based on D.C. Code §1-1510 (Supp.V, 1978) on the grounds that the Mayor had no authority by a Mayor's Reorganization Order to amend an act of Congress, as well as a recent amendment passed by the Counsel and approved by the U.S. Congress regarding the administrative and appeal authority of the Unemployment Compensation Board. It is worth noting that on July 29, 1981, the Mayor transmitted to Congress for a 30-day review D.C. Law 4-42 which among other things re-defined "reorganization" so to include the power of the Mayor to abolish agencies. This retroactive attempt to vest the Mayor with power which he previously did not have, effectively amended Sections 422(11) and (12) of the Reorganization Act, in violation of Congress's mandate regarding the use of a set Charter amending procedure of Section 303(a) of the Reorganization Act and the general prohibition on retroactive legislation.

²⁸ As noted earlier, Mr. Rodriguez raised two issues regarding alleged overpayment, first he had not been overpaid benefits since he was eligible for compensation prior to January 7, 1980; second, he was not in an overpayment situation since he was not employed during the period in question (see footnote 15 and 18).

²⁹ This Court has repeatedly held that although a delegation of legislative power is permitted, Congress must set standards and rules of conduct to be followed. In short, the delegation cannot be too broad a declaration, leaving Congress's agent too much room for discretion. See Panama Refining Co. v.
